"Hinduism," said the speaker, "is the religion of greater part of the people of India. Originally it was a worship of the powers of nature, but from contact with the demon-worshippers, whom they found when they entered India, the Hindus adopted the almost numberless deities they now acknowledge.

Interest Centers In Meeting Called by Palmer to Consider Methods

NORMAL LEVEL IS SOUGHT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.-Steps toward reducing the high cost of living are expected this week

While all government departments are working toward the end of alleviating unrest by restoring a normal level of prices, interest centers in the meeting this week of the conference called by Attorney General Palmer to consider the best method of procedure, especially with respect to profiteering.

There are indications that the Attorney General is paying especial attention to cases of profiteering. He has at his disposal a great volume of information collected by the federal costs in scores of industries. While trade commission, showing production there is no law by which profiteering may be punished directly, Mr. Palmer has said that there is a good deal of "good law" on the statute books, and it is believed he will find a way to punish any cases where there are evidences of extortion.

SALESMEN ELIMINATE

Carries District By 1.- Long Wait for Trains.

Light Business Car Now Enables Them to Make Quick Trips from City to City at Reduced Cost.

To eliminate expensive selling methods, many wholesale houses have equipped their sales forces with light delivery cars, with the result that their representatives have been able to triple the number of towns visited. carrying their samples with them.

This growing practice bids fair to alleviate to a great extent the troubles of the traveling salesman. Isolated towns and once-a-day railway trains have made many a salesman throw up his hands in disgust and desert his profession for fields less wearisome and nerve wrecking. Not only did such railway facilities tend to reduce the ranks of the traveling salesmen, but they were responsible for an increased selling cost of dry goods, shoes, groceries, hardware hats and similar staples. Using the railroads, the salesman was able to make but one town a day, where several hours were sufficient to call on the trade. The remaining hours were spent in enforced idleness, with the result that weekly hotel bills and expense accounts soared.

But the development of the motor car, and particularly the light commercial car, is rapidly doing away with these old-fashioned methods of wholesale selling. An interesting sample of the successful use of sucn a car is that of B. A. Rives, a shoe salesman in southern Alabama.

In August, 1918, Mr. Rives bought Dodge Brothers business car and abandoned the southern railroads as a means of covering his territory. Since that day the car has been in continual use, carrying the salesman, driver and a bulky 700 lbs of samples. To the Dodge Brothers dealer from whom the car was purchased, Mr. Rives wrote: "I find that I can make nearly three times as many towns in a week as I formerly could 117 by railroad and the weekly expense is no greater. The pulling qualities of your business car cannot be excelled. and the upkeep for the time that I have had it has been too little to count. The Portrait

By WALTER J. DELANEY

* (Copyright, 1919, by the Western News-

Poverty had been bad, sickness orse, stranded, penniless in a great city, the seeming crisis of all fortune was to Walter Bliss but as nothing compared with the mental suffering that had come about through what makes most souls buoyant and happy—

A strange fate seemed to have pur sued the ambitious young artist. He had come to Chicago believing that all kinds of opportunities would develop for brush and pen. His letters to his ester Ruth became more brief, and only occasional. Dispirited and unable to secure even the necessaries of life, libsr was taken ill, dwindled to a mere shadow in a hospital, and, weak and spiritless, tramped the streets, a sad parody as a convalescent. He stood looking into the window of an invit-ing restaurant at the sumptuous fare displayed, when a friendly hand grasped his sholuder,

"Why, Bliss!" fell upon his hearing "The first time in three years! I say, what in the world has happened to Generous hearted, impulsive Hugh Worden meant every word he said. Within a week Bliss found himself installed in a pretty studio with two living rooms adjoining.

"I am going to introduce you to a Miss Eva Dubois tomorrow," said Worden one day. "You are to paint

"That is your flancee?" asked Bliss. "Hardly that. She is a young lady I think a great deal of, and who I believe likes me. I went to her par-ents when I knew that Cupid had delivered a fatal dart. Neither her fa-ther nor mother discouraged me, but they insisted that no actual engage-ment should materialize for a year. I want to present her portrait to her mother on her birthday."

Eve Dubols flashed upon the vision Pliss the following day, a marvel of loveliness and grace. From the first moment he realized that the im-pression made upon him by this fairy creature would remain while life last-

There were a number of sittings. Soutelines Worden was present. The outlines and main essentials of the portrait were secured. Bliss was to have a month to fill in details. He had sent for his sister Ruth, and one day she came, a sweet, busy little besug, delighted to reach the acme of her ambition as housekeeper for her idolized brother. Worden was there when Ruth arrived. Bliss found out a little inter that Worden made all kinds of excuses to visit the studio after that. Later, passing one of the living rooms of the suite, he was amazed, confound-ea to overhear Ruth and Worden in earnest conversation. Their tones vere low and loving, and Worden was telling his companion how fervently be ndored her.

Bliss had just completed the portrait of Miss Dubois and it had been framed and sent to her home. Only an hour revious Worden had told him cheer-ity: "Eva is anxious to have you call and decide on the best light position

Bliss was in a ferment. parent disloyalty of his friend, the fact that his sister had seemingly fallen in love with him, the sad conviction that he was about to see Mis-Dubols for the last time depressed and crushed him. By a servant he was shown into the room at the Dubois home in which stood the portrait. With deep emotion Bliss viewed the picture. His soul was in his eyes, his entire pose that of a person struggling with emotions of no ordinary nature, and so Eva Dubois construed the presentment as she entered the room.

"Will you kindly go to the library and see papa," spoke Eva finally, "He will explain some matters to you apper-taining to the picture better than I.

And I will wait for you here."

There was added to the strange events of the day a final amazing disclosure for the young artist. Mr. Dubois told him that he wished to pay for the portrait, as Hugh Worden and his daughter had decided to terminate

"A good fellow, Worden," spoke Mr. Dubols freely, "but he seems to be surer of a new attraction than my daughter, who, while a good friend to him, seems to have been that only."

Eva flushed when Bliss came back to Neither referred to Worden or Eva invited Bliss to her mother's birthday party. She seemed to en-courage the devotion he felt for her. He spoke to Ruth and he had a plain. clear talk with Worden, but the latter was so deeply in love this time that nothing would do but a speedy wed-ding. And agreeably and willingly both Bliss and Eva were present at the ceremony, and when they parted that night Walter Bliss fully knew that he was the real first love of the original of the beautiful portrait.

OUTDOOR BANKS FOR VEGETABLE STORAGE

Safe Place for Potatoes, Carrots. Beets, Turnips, Etc.

Well Drained Location Should Be Selected-Straw, Leaves or Similar Material May Bo Used for Lining-Cover With Dirt

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

Outdoor banks or pits are used very generally for keeping vegetables. The conical pit is used commonly for such vegetables as potatoes, carrots, beets. rnips, salsify, parsnips and he cabbage and is constructed as follows: A well-drained location should be chosen and the product piled on the surface of the ground; or a shallow excavation may be made of suitable size and six or eight inches deep, which may be lined with straw, leaves or similar material and the vegetables placed on the litter in a conical pile.

with straw or similar material and finally with earth to a depth of two or three inches. As winter approaches the dirt covering should be increased until it is several inches thick. The depth of the earth covering is deter mined by the severity of the winters in the particular locality. It is well to cover the pits with straw, corn fodder of manure during severely cold weather.

The amount of ventilation necessary will depend upon the size of the pit Small pits containing but a few bush els of vegetables will receive sufficient ventilation if the straw between the vegetables and dirt is allowed to ex new baby's looks were all they might pits, but it is difficult to get them out in cold weather, so that when a pit is opened it is desirable to remove the entire contents at once. For this reason it is advisable to construct several small pits rather than one large one, and instead of storing each crop in a pit by itself it is better to place a small quantity of several kinds of veg-etables in the same pit, so that it will be necessary to open only one bank to get a supply of all of them. In storing several crops in the same bank it is a good plan to separate them with straw, leaves or other material. The vegetables from the small pit may be placed temporarily in the storage room

DEAD VEGETATION IS USEFUL

Grass, Straw, Stalks and Leaves Should Be Plowed Under for Humus-Making Material.

According to the Ohio experiment station, vegetable matter, such as grass, straw, stalks and leaves, loses in six months fully 50 per cent of its carbon or humus-making material. In other words, these materials plowed under in the fall are twice as valuable for humus as when plowed under in the spring. Here is an excellent rea-son why every day, when the ground is dry enough, should be utilized in plowing under the dead vegetation on our fields.

IMPROVE FERTILITY OF SOIL

To Make It Possible to Raise Good Crops Next Year Land Must Have Good Culture.

Every farmer is interested in get-ting large crops and ample profits this year. This is laudable and highly de-sirable. But good crops will be need-ed next year and the years that fol-low. To make this possible the soil must have such culture as will im-prove its fertility.

Effect of the Circus.

After all, civilization is sometimes a bore. The circus carries us back to the freedom of the great beginning. Wherefore, even psychologists forget their trades in such days and became for the moment grown-up children like the rest of us, responsive to the wild blood of their remote progenitors .-

IN LOVING MEMORY

Frank Langdon Moye.

There are times when the falter ing word that falls from the lip is but a meaningless symbol; there are times when the tongue, palsied and halt, cannot utter the thoughts that arise within.

This was never more true than when we heard that the brave and manly life of Frank L. Moye was no

Down in southern Georgia there grew up a boy, and he had a vision of a broader life; accordingly he left his native heath for Gallatin Tennessee, and entered a preparatory school for boys. After being there one year he decided to make enough money to take him there the second year. He came to Kentucky with this purpose in view and with the aid of friends he accomplished his object, again entering school at Gallatin. He was happy in his work, was winning honors, both in his classes and on the athletic field. With the advent of his country into the world wide war, he gave up all he had labored so hard to attain and was not only one of the first to volunteer, but with his customary self abnergation he sought aviation as being not only that branch of service which called for the greatest skill and daring, but also that whose superiority was a condition precedent to allied success. all times his was a character of robust moral fibre, set off by those finer qualities that adorn life, and none of these ever showed to better advantage than after he donned the uniform of his country. Twice he was ready to sail and great was his disappointment when he did not get to serve his country abroad. When told by some friends they were glad he did not get to go he quoted this: "He burned clear flame, while he who treads the endless march of dusty years grows blind and choked with dust before he dies", adding I do not want to die of old age but would rather "inherit the immortal youth-

Taken in the very morning of life we are reminded of the words: "We evening, we expect the flowers wither in the autumn, the stream to be frozen in winter. EFFECTIVE MEASURES FOR PREVENTING EROSION OF MUCH VALUABLE FARM LAND

Gullying Which Causes a Loss of Land and a Lowering of earth by water, costs the farmers of the United States $1,000,000 every year. Soil losses from this cause oc cur in every state of the Union and in almost every county of every state. Nine years ago the National Conservation congress reported that 4,000,000 icres of farm land had been practically ruined by soil erosion. So serious is the condition that Dr. N. S.

Shaler, formerly dean of the Lawrence Scientific school, was once moved to remark that "If mankind cannot devise and enforce ways of dealing with the earth which will preserve this source of life, we must look forward to the time-remote it may be, yet clearly discernible—when our kind, having wasted its greatest inheritance, will fade from the earth because of the ruin it has accomplished."

Ruins Fertile Land.

Erosion injures or practically ruins fertile lands in a number of ways. The upper and most fertile parts of the soil are washed away until the land becomes barren and unproductive. Deep gullies are formed which result in an actual loss of land for cultivation, a lowering of the water giving the soil a better opportunity to table and a deficient supply of mois- absorb the water. Rich bottom lands are often covered with deposits of sand washed from the hill lands. Hence the direct losses of the upland farmer are the land occupied by gullies, smaller crop yields each year, and a continued decrease in the value of the land. Some of the losses of the bottom farmer are the land covered to a great depth with sand, crops damaged by overflows or deposits of sand, a continued decrease in the value of the land, and the money invested in the construction of drainage ditches that have been filled or partly filled with sand. Thus it is

Methods of Preventing Erosion.

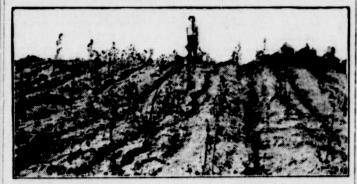

Since erosion is due largely to the rapid movement of the rain water over the surface of the ground, methods of preventing erosion must cause the water either to sink into the soil or flow away slowly over the surface to a drainage channel. If the rain water were absorbed by the soil as fast as it falls, there would be very little erosion.

In order to drink up surface water rapidly a soil must be very permeable. which means that it must contain fairly large open spaces through which the rain water can pass easily, or where it can be stored temporarily. Some soils are naturally very permeable. A number of ways of increasing the permeability of a soil are deep plowing, plowing under organic matter such as manure, stubble, stalks and cover crops; the practice of tile drainage, and, in certain soils, the use of explosives.

portant that some kind of cover crop, such as vetch, clover, oats, wheat or rye, be grown on the land during the winter or at any time that the land is not used for other crops.

Contour plowing, which consists of breaking the ground along level lines across the slopes, reduces the flow of water directly down the slope. Also in planting and cultivating the crops the same level lines are followed so that a shallow trough is made above each row. Most of the rain water is caucht, and held it this trough said. caught and held in this trough until it either evaporates or is absorbed by the soil. Contour plowing should invariably be practiced on all hill lands. The beginning of a great many gullies is due to the practice of plowing and apparent that both the bottom and the upland farmer should be concerned in slopes.

ond Year in History of Insect That Infested Territory.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

Due to the hard winter of 1917-18. the boll weevil lost ground in his conquest of the cotton belt last year. This is exceptional in the history of the weevil, in that it is the second year since the establishment of this insect in the United States that there has been a net reduction in territory infested by this pest.

This does not mean that the move ment of the boll weevil has been permanently stopped. In fact, the net loss of territory for the year was but a fraction of the loss at the begin ning of 1918. Much of the lost territory was regained by the weevil later

The losses in territory occurred in Texas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, and Alabama. The weevil gained territory in Florida, South Carolina, Georgia, and New Mexico. This is the first report of the boll weevil on cotton in New Mexico, where it was found in the "Squatter's rights?" mildly insinu-ated Driscoll.

"Who says it? Don't you come snooking around here trying to scare me or mine!" and the movements of the weapon in the trembling hands be came positively menacing.

"Why, father, you must not become excited and discourteous this way! and instantly there glided to his side a young girl so dazzlingly lovely that Vance Driscoll stood spellbound, "Come, dear," she continued, soothing-"I am sure the gentleman means ly. "You say you have a deed to the property?" asked Driscoll.
"Yes, I have. I never recorded it, but I'm going to now. You act as if you're looking for the truth, young man, and I've no objection to show-ing it to you."

The old man went to another part of the house. "Be patient and indulgent with my father," spoke his daughter to Driscoll. "This little home

The purchase of Government Bonds and Savings Stamps has increased rather than decreased savings deposits in the banks of the country. cent statements from various sections, m Los Angeles to New York, show that since the armistice was signed the savings banks of the country have been flooded with deposits. New York State recently passed the $2,000,000,000 mark, with the number of depositors running up to more than 3,500.

The deposits piled steadily up through the war period. A statement covering savings deposits in all banks other than national, issued in Feb-ruary, 1919, showed that the amount from $6,147,592 :32 in 1913 to $7,727,007,971 in 1918.

In the latter part of May savings banks of Los Angeles reported depos-ts of approximately $160,000,000. The U. S. Postal Savings banks found Jan uary and February of the present year exceptionally big months for savings.

The Postal Savings banks have conducted only very limited educational campaigns in the past, and the credit for big increases is freely given to the work done in the Savings Stamp campaigns. Persons who get the thrift habit practice it in savings de-posits as well as in Thrift and Savings Stamp purchases, it has been shown. The figures prove that in the tre endous call upon the people of the country for money to float the Liberty Loans and the War Savings cam-paigns, deposits were not generally withdrawn from the savings banks. Effort was made to pay for stamps and bonds out of the family income without touching the nest eggs that are growing in the savings banks.

A commerce report issued in June shows that in Japan all records for savings have been broken in the early part of this year. The average monthly increase has been about 12,-000,000 yen ($5,982,000) since February, 1918. It may well be noted by Americans that they will be obliged to practice thrift to the utmost, if the United States is no to lag behind the

BEWARE THE GET. RICH-QUICK MAN

In these days when money is much easier to get than in days that many can remember, the "get-rich-quick" plan is a favorite temptation held alluringly before the public. The Treas-uary Department has recently issued a bulletin dealing with this pernicious evil. The really wise person who cannot afford to "take a chance" finds in the War Savings Stamp an investment just to his liking. He may invest as little as $5 or he may invest up to $1,000, and the little "baby bond" is safe guarded just as much as the $1,000 bond—drawing 4 per cent com-pounded quarterly and is absolutely safe.

HARRY LAUDER ON THRIFT STAMPS

"I contend that the man who invests in Government Securities," says Harry Lauder, the eminent Scotch comedian, "who buys War Savings Stamps and Thrift Stamps, is investing in the welfare of his country and welfare of those depending upon War Savings Stamps will win the war. By that I mean that I do not consider the war fully ended until the world has secured a comfortable set-tlement for all the maimed and wounded men who got their wounds

THRIFT TEACHING DEVELOPS CHARACTER

Surely nothing is more important than the teaching of the fundamental principles of saving. Surely nothing can develop stronger character than the self-denial which will necessarily be practiced in learning the principles of economy. Surely nothing affords a better opportunity of teaching the practical principles of patriotism than that which is afforded by the use of War Savings Stamps in teaching thrift in the schools of our country.

REGIONAL BANK SUPPLIES

Terms and Conditions Appear On Face and They Are Exceedingly Liquid.

Fresh from the Government printing office in Washington, and reposing in the vaults of the Federal Reserve Bank in St. Louis, are millions of dollars worth of the latest secur ties issued by the United States Government for circulation among patri otic and thrifty citizens of Missouri,

Government bonds are not the nov olty they once were. The war saw to it that the people of America as well as European countries were educated along these lines. The Liberty Bonds were introduced into many instituions and households, and millions of people who never saw a Government Bond prior to the war now reckon that little piece of registered or couponed paper as one of their most cherished

But this new issue of Uncle Sam's the most unique and readily ab sorbed security of all. It is the outgrowth of the War Savings Campaign. and bids fair to have even a wider cir culation and greater popularity than even the Liberty Bonds. The instrument itself, issued in two denomina-tions of $1,000 and $100 are splendid specimens of the engraver's art.
While in many respects the certificates are simply Savings Stamp of greatly enlarged value, they take on the physical beauty of Uncle Sam's ost solemn promise thousand dollar certificate is 7% inches wide by 6 inches deep, and printed on that specially prepared and almost uncounterfeitable paper that in itself breathes confidence The back ground is the giant and of liberty Enlightening the World, and the ray from the great torch flares rth to each extremity of the paper

The border in ness and artistic, and the wording is plainly engraved. The printing is in a rich brown ink.

The smaller new security, the $100 certificate, is the exact counterpart of the larger $1,000 certificate, save in the amount and the further fact that the printing is in blue ink.

The demand for these new issues.

The demand for these new issues was such that the Treasury Department could not ignore it. Many persons who realized the advantages of the War Savings Stamps wanted to avoid the necessity of buying the small stamps and sticking them to the cards issued by the Government. The bulk of $1,000 in $5 stamps, too, were

Now one may buy either the $100 or the $1,000 certificate, paying the price fixed by the Government for this month, namely, $836 for the latter. In August the price will be $838, and will increase $2 each month. The $100 certificate may be bought this month for $83.60 while in August the cost will be $83.80, and increases in cost 20 cents a month. Each security

Those who hold the securities of the old and smaller denominations may exchange them for the new. In order to get a $100 certificate the applicant must submit 20 completely filled out $5 War Savings Certificates. For the $1,000 certificate it will take ten times as many. The unregistered certificate may be exchanged through any bank that is authorized to sell War Savings Certificates. The registered one, of course, must be redeemed through the post office department. The interest rate, as well as all other provisions in the new securities is identical with that of the familiar War Savings Stamps—four per cent interest com-pounded quarterly. The redemption privilege, too, is the same. If the holder must realize on his investment he may obtain cash for the same by giving ten days' notice and surrender ing the same through the Treasury Department. If not carried to ma-turity the certificate bears interest at the rate of 3 per cent.

The law provides that the certificates are not negotiable, and plainly printed on the face, in large capitals.

are the words, "Not transferable."

There can be no shrinkage in value of this form of security. If after carrying it for a year, and then necessity compels disposing of the same, the holder will receive the full amount paid, plus 3 per cent. If, however, he holds it to maturity it draws four per cent compounded quarterly, which is exactly 4½ per cent.

As far as security is concerned, the total wealth of the United States is Education Always Helps.

The success of the unlettered man is often argued to show that men do not need education. In special cases the truth may seem to be conclusive, but did you ever stop to inquire what the fellow might have become had be education added to his natural talents? He has succeeded in spite of a handicap and not because of it.

Surely Drafty. are all sorts of different ways of bringing a thing home to peopie. Take the case, for instance, of a member of the Essex district council in England, recently, who wanted to enable his fellow-councilors to realize the shameful disrepair of a certain cottage near by. It was so drafty, he said, that tunes could be played on dong cracks in the walls.

Waldo Martin, successful busines man and manufacturer, felicitated himself with the belief that he had mapped out a pleasant retirement from trade activity and harmoniously adjusted his family affairs in a mas erful way. He had sold his old home at Taunton, had given a capitalist an option on his plant, with the agree-ment that he would remain in charge for a year until his affairs were smoothly grooved under the new regime. Then he had gone to his spin-ster sister Emily and asked for her counsel and co-operation.

"It's the girls I want to talk to you about, Emily," he said. "With the old home gone they will have to come and stay with you till we decide on a nev

I hope it will be permanently, Waldo," responded Miss Martin, sin-cerely. "I don't know which I love the most-Edna or Grace-but it will the happiest day of my life when

"And charge, Emily," added her brother, "You are a wise, worthy woman, and I feel it will be a blessing if you will guide and guard them. They will graduate next month. Spare no expense in giving them all the fashion and society advantages due to the daughters of a rich man. I don't want to lose them for a long time yet, but sooner or later both will get mar-ried. In regard to this feature I wish you to bear in mind their different characteristics; study them, analyze them, and select for them only such acquaintances and friends as are temperamentally in accord with the same. "I think I comprehend you, brother," said Miss Martin thoughtfully. She was well fitted to undertake the charge committed to her care.

As their father had told Miss Martin the girls were temperamental, each in her own peculiar way. Edna was a flitting, flashing beam of sunshine, merry to the point of innocent folly, skimming the realities of life care-less and free, her ringing laugh a constant accompaniment of her vola tile presence.

Grace on the contrary was serious sedate, emotionally impressible to the point of emphasis. Tears came readily with her, The sorrows and troubles of others affected her as though they re direct relations.

Hyacinth Lodge became an enlivened center of enjoyment for the sisters, and within a month after their new installation was the center of a new co-terie of friends. There was a select group of young people whom Miss Martin favored, and the lawn of the lodge was a pretty sight afternoons and evenings, with its pleasing array of youth and beauty. Mr. Martin came to Acton one week end and seemed to take pleasure in watching the group at tennis, archery and other engross ing enjoyments. "I have noticed two of your young men friends who seem to divide their attentions between Edna and Grace." he said to his sister. "That bright fellow, Roy Blake, is an exact counterpart of Edna, in his light, free-hearted way. There is a temperamental blend there that suggests perfect harmony as to tastes and ideals."

"And what do you think of his rather serious opposite?"

"Sidney Morton is for Grace," de-clared Mr. Martin. "Do you know, Emily, I think one-half of the trouble with Grace is that people do not un-derstand her; therefore she does not

I am writing a combined policy that should attract every tobacco grower in the county. It gives you protection in the field against HAIL, and in the barn against FIRE, LIGHT-NING, WINDSTORM AND TORNADO. This policy automatically covers your first load into the barn. For instance, if by chance you should happen to have a load in the barn and a storm arises with hail and lightning, and your crop is destroyed in the field by hail and your barn is struck by lightning (this happened twice last year) burning same, you will collect for damage done by Hail as well as your load in the barn.

I also wish to announce that I can now give you $200.00 an acre protection in the field against Hail. Several have asked for this and I have had to refuse until today, but I have it for you now.

HAIL RATES.

$50.00 per Acre in field and $200. per acre in Barn for four months at $7.

GRASSHOPPER IS GOOD FOR FEED

When Dried They Can Be Fed to Poultry Flock With Other Feeds During Winter.

INSECTS HIGH IN PROTEIN

Poisoned Bait Recommended Consists of Bran or Sawdust Made Tasty and Attractive by Addition of Molasses and Fruit.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

When grasshoppers make their appearance they can be destroyed by the common poisoned balt method. But there is another way of getting rid of grasshoppers that makes the pests pay for the trouble of killing or catching This method consists of driving a grasshopper catcher through an infested field, catching all the grasshoppers that hop, and then feeding the insects to chickens. They can be dumped into sacks and hung up to dry and fed as dry grasshoppers, or if it is preferred to feed the grasshoppers alive, the machine can be hauled to the poultry yard and placed so that the front will face the light. The insects will find their way out but not too fast for an ordinary flock of chickens. Thus grasshopper catcher becomes a to their home in Fort Wayne, Ind., poultry self-feeder.

How to Make Grasshopper Catcher. The grasshopper catcher, which has an advantage over the old-style hop-perdozer, in that the insects can be utilized for chicken feed, is about 16 feet long with an upright but curved piece of tin in front and so arranged that the grasshoppers will strike it as they hop up, falling to the bottom and back through a narrow trap opening into a box behind. The tin front does not extend quite to the bottom, where, just in front of the tin shield, is a strip of tin so placed that there is an opening about 1½ or 2 inches wide. This front strip or lip may be made by using a 16-foot length of gutter, one side of which is flattened outward. The back and top of the box in the rear is covered with wire screen and the top should be so hinged that it can easily be opened and the accumulated grasshoppers shoveled out as needed A horse is hitched to an extended beam at each end and the catcher

As Royce Merrill walked by the desk he had passed the night, and paid his its box took thence a letter and tossed it to him. Very casually the transient guest observed its open flat and one-cent stamp, discerned that it was an advertisement and threw on the floor without even glancing at its superscription.

An humble, modest sort of a youn; fellow was Royce Merrill. Brought up in, the country and longing to get back again to rational village life, he counted two years' experience as the ad vance agent of a cheap show as so much time lost. Where he was headed for Merrill scarcely knew. He was drifting, half-planning, finding a position in some promising country town awaiting any circumstance or adven ture that might develop the future, and ready therefore as to anything that might come along.

As Merrill left the desk a heavy-set unpretentious-appearing man arose from his seat in the lobby, picked up the disdained envelope, read its ad dress and chuckled. Then he started ofter Merrill. At a quiet street corner he overtook him.

"A word with you, if you please, Mr. Pierce Danton," he spoke, catch-ing and holding Merrill's arm.

"Sonfewhat mistaken, aren't you," challenged Merrill. "That is not my

"Oh, yes, it is," insisted the other You just dropped this, didn't you." and he extended the envelope, and surenough it bore the name he had men tioned. "I am Zeb Brown, deputy sheriff of Princeton, twenty miles down the line. I've got the right to detain you, and as there are some explana tions for you to make at that same burg. I'm going to take you there."

"You are exploiting a case of mis taken identity, my friend," observed Merrill, pleasantly enough and growing curious.
"Hardly. I don't suppose you will deny that this is your picture?"

The deputy sheriff extended a pho tograph and Merrill looked half starled, tremendously puzzled. The pic ture was that of a man marvelously sembling himself.

"All right," he spoke readily. "Go ahead. Do you arrest me?"

"I don't, unless you get too clever, or ugly. It's simple. Silas Bland, my friend, the hotelkeeper, sent me to hunt you up. It isn't so much the fifty-dollar board bill you ran up under false pretenses and skipped, as it unded pride of his pretty daughter, Myrtle. She don't want you back because she cares for you, but she wants to see you punished for swindling her father and humiliating her. You went around Princeton hint ing at the hit you had made with her -neighbors are gossiping. Now she is a deserted bride that was to be she will take her dainty, womanly way of showing her utter scorn in you publicly, and you will have to settle up that bill and suffer her con-

It was an ideal town, Princeton. This was the first discovery Merrill made, then that the Atlantic hotel was a very attractive place of abode. As he was led into its reception room his official guardian sang out through an

"Si" did not respond, but a very dainty, sparkling-eyed, lovely-faced girl of eighteen crossed the threshold. There was fire in her pretty eyes and an indignant flush upon her bonny cheeks. She advanced quickly, paused dismayed, scanned the smiling captive closely and fluttered forth:
"Oh, Mr. Brown, you've made a dreadful mistake!"

"I told our friend that back at Fordville," said Merrill, with a courteous bow to the young lady of engaging presence.

"Where's your father?" demanded the village functionary, "I'll see what he says about it."

"Down at the post office," and Myrtle Bland stole an interested glance at Merrill. "You can go after him while I try and apologize for the fearful blunder we have made, You won't run away while he is gone, will you,

"Royce Merrill. Not I. Miss Bland."

"If any reasonable sum, or a month free of the best we have will fix up our hideous mistake," said honest Si-las Bland, after he had heard the whole story, "we'll settle the score willingly."

"Why, it hasn't cost me anything," replied Merrill, with a jolly laugh. "Pil stay the month and maybe longer, for like the town, but I'll pay for it. What this little trick of fate has led me into decidedly pleases me," as he looked at Myrtle and she at him with modestly-veiled eyes. Not Bread Alone.

Man cannot live by bread alone and does not spend his money for food alone. If there is to be an investigation of the prices of necessities, to determine their legitimacy, it should be an investigation of more than the prices of food. It is true that we consume food three times a day, or twice a day at any rate-some persons getting along at a pinch with two meals, but three remaining the rule and the custombut we wear clothing all day and all night, and we wear shoes all day. Shoes and clothing are necessities. They are, moreover, agricultural products, as much as cabbage or poatoes. Our cotton clothing comes from the cotton fields of the South, our woolen clothing from the sheep ranches of the West and the few-too few-farms otherwhere whose owners are willing to risk sheepraising while the poor man's ill-fed dog ranges the countryside, tempted into evil doing by the pangs of hunger. Our shoes come from the cattle farms when they are leather, from the Cotton States when they are canvas; from the paper mill, of course, insofar as they are cheapened, to the manufacturer, by the "adulteration" which has suggested the need of a pure shoes law. Clothing and shoes are not the only necessities aside from food. Fuel, hardware and furniture, chinaware, glassware, and the 100 and one articles and commodities which every house owner buys and which are paid for indirectly by every renter of a residence or an apartment, are necessities. There is profiteering in food? Well then, there is profiteering in all other necessities which are selling at prices as high in proportion to pre-war prices as the present prices of food.

Assuredly many bread-winning lasses have failed to get increase proportionate to the advanced cost of commodities. Some classes have had little or no increase. If the increases of pay and reduction of hours can be charged legitimately with the increase of commodity prices, instead of resulting from those prices, the profiteers are the classe which have received doubled or tripled wages since the war began. If the commodity prices are not warranted by the factors of production and distribution then the proprietors, manufacturers, wholesalers or retailers-who "tilt" prices unwarrantably are the profiteers. In either case the victims are the classes which have nad to stand the advanced cost of living, without increased income with which to meet it, but at all events the high prices are not food prices metaly, or food prices and shoe and clothing prices merely, but commodity prices generally. If prices are to be investigated, with the hope of reducing them it is just as important to find why the former $1 shirt sells for $2, the former $5 pair of shoes for $10 as it is to find why a peck of potatoes sells for twice what it cost before the war; just as important to find why cups For further particulars, see and saucers, pots and pans, cooking stoves, sell for two or three times their former cost as to find why coffee, canteloupes and cammembert cheese are "up".—Courier-Journal.
